Rec^d. Sir

Before I was apprised by the public prints of your arrival in England I received intimation of it by a letter which you were so kind as to forward to me from my nephew William Sparrow, who has written in the kindest terms about yourself and the truly important object you are anxious to accomplish. If I can render you any service during your stay in these countries I shall most gladly do it. I hope you purpose to visit Ireland. We have here an hierarchy able, and I should hope willing to assist you — and it would be of consequence to bring your object fairly & fully before them. Two or three English Bishops could at once secure for you a prosperous entrance into my native land — and there is every expectation that the increasing interest which is felt here in the propagation of divine truth would operate powerfully in your favour — and certainly the cause you have in hand ought to be promptly & efficiently assisted. — It would afford me great pleasure to see you under my roof and I hope if you come to Ireland (which I strongly recommend) you will furnish me to enjoy that gratification. Kilkenny is a very central city — on the Mail Coach road from Dublin to Cork and near several Bishops' sees. — Your first introduction should be to the Primate & Archbishop of Dublin. Their sanction would at once secure for you general attention. You will excuse this hint. —

With every wish for the success of your exertions — and that you may be made eminently instrumental in laying a humanest foundation for the future spread of pure sanctified religion in America I have the honor to be Your faithful servant
Peter Roe

Should you have occasion to write, which I hope you will please to direct
